

Joseph Roth (1894-1939), the greatest newspaper correspondent of his age, left the splintering Weimar Republic for Paris in 1925. His essays from Report from a Parisian Paradise evoke a world of suppleness, beauty and promise. So prophetic were Roths perceptions of a world where the girls became increasingly more lost and innocent that he increasingly resorted to drink to douse his vision of a conflagration that could not be averted. From the port town of Marseille to the Riviera of Nice and Monte Carlo, to the erotic hill country around Avignon Roths, and from the socialist workers and cattlemen with whom Roth ate breakfast to prostitutes and Sunday bullfighters, Roths book is a swan song to a European order that could no longer hold.
